Pace University, a private comprehensive university with campuses in Westchester County and New York City invites applications and nominations for two tenure track full-time faculty positions in secondary education for the Fall Semester of 2005.

The School of Education faculty at Pace University engages in a wide range of diverse scholarly, teaching, and civic activities that create a rich, dynamic learning environment for our students and an intellectually challenging and rigorous collegial community.

The successful candidate will teach in Pace University’s urban alternative teacher preparation programs. Applicants must have a specialization and experience in teaching a secondary school subject or subjects [preferably mathematics or science] and in the preparation of secondary school teachers [general and content methods]. Preference to candidates with additional expertise in technology, educational psychology, foundations, literacy, assessment, ESL, or special education. Requirements for the position include an earned doctorate (ABDs considered), K-12 teaching excellence and experience (preferably urban) and a record of, or potential for, scholarship. We seek individuals who are reflective, who integrate theory and practice and who seek a strong community of teacher/scholars.

Pace University is an Equal Employment and Affirmative Action Employer, committed to ensuring a diverse learning and working environment. Consistent with our commitment to a diverse faculty and staff to serve our diverse student population, candidates of color and individuals from other traditionally under-represented groups are strongly encouraged to apply. For more information about Pace University, please visit our website at http://www.pace.edu.

Interested candidates should send a cover letter, vitae and letters from three references to:

Ms. Annjanet Woodburn, Assistant Dean
School of Education
Pace University
861 Bedford Road
Pleasantville, NY 10570